So sorry about Bethanee. I found a scripture I like to share at JW.org, Acts 24:15, "there is going to be a resurrection," I wish your family the very best for the future.

Bethanee and I first met another lifetime ago when she tagged along with a mutual friend who stopped by my house. Her eyes struck me immediately. And she had an effortless cool that reeled me in. Some years later, the opportunity to forge a more substantial relationship presented itself. It was one like no other I'd ever had. She was absolutely beautiful, as much so on the inside as she obviously was on the outside. We had no problems coming together on our likes and interests: films, television, music, art. There were many times that we introduced new things to each other. We grew together. She regularly made me feel like the luckiest man in the world to have her in my life. After 12 years, a time came when our paths diverged. Thankfully, she wound up back in my life and our communication proved to be rock solid, still. We talked frequently, through the days and into early evenings. Our phones attached us while simultaneously watching the same episode of 'The Goldbergs', physically miles apart, in spirit (and telephone) side by side. We talked about our lives together and introducing our cat Stella to her younger kitty, Mochi. Thankfully, we never departed without an honest 'good-bye', even that last time. Only days later she was gone. Hearing the last words she ever spoke to me over and over in my head has helped bring me at least a small measure of solace. That, and knowing that she finally has true peace, is what helps make this loss bearable for me. The notions of the days and years that were yet to come are now impossible. And that hurt, I'm afraid, will never go away. I love you Bethanee Ann.

Beth, I can't believe you are gone so soon. We may not have known each other for as many years as some others, but during the time we did you were a wonderful and supportive friend. We met during one of the worst times of my life and you always had a kind word, an ear to listen, and a metaphorical shoulder to cry on when needed. The greatest gift you gave me however, was making my dear friend and brother Noah so incredibly happy. As happy as I've ever known him to be. It breaks my heart that you were taken from this world with so much love and happiness left to give, but I pray that wherever the afterlife may take us; that you have found a place free of pain. Your friend, always.-

June 2020 I first met beth. I was going through a rough loss in life and our of the darkness came the most beautiful woman I've ever seen. We hit it off as friends and then quickly became love birds. The 3 and a half years I was lucky enough to call her mine was the best time of my life. She was so beautiful,smart and not only the love of my life but my best friend as well. I don't know how to start again without her. But I'm happy she's at peace. I will love you forever beth. I miss you so much. Thank you for everything.
